

Asia Leon, Class of 2013

Early Childhood Consultant,
Community Living Toronto

“Focus on building meaningful relationships and connections. The friendships and networks you create in high school can provide support and opportunities throughout your life. Don't be afraid to reach out, collaborate, and engage with others.”

I serve as an early childhood resource consultant supporting children 0-12 years of age with a variety of extra supports needs. I work directly with childcare centre staff and families, as well as liaise with community services and professionals/experts in the area of early childhood services to fully support children with extra support needs.

My skills can be attributed to my diploma in early childhood education from Seneca College, a bachelor's degree in child development from Seneca College, and a master's degree in early childhood studies awarded by Ryerson University.

I am grateful to be an alumna of SJCS as I couldn't have made these life changing experiences without the support of staff!
