Business Development, Salesforce

Don't resist change and be open to failure. Good things don't come easy!

I am currently working in business development in the Healthcare and Life Sciences vertical at Salesforce. In my current role, I help businesses transform how they care for patients by using digital tools and AI to improve personalized care, streamline processes, and make better decisions faster. This means healthier outcomes and more efficient healthcare!

I started my tech sales career when I landed an internship during university for a software IT-solutions provider called Softchoice. This experience has paved way for me to explore different opportunities in different industries such as consulting, finance and now healthcare!

During my time in university, I helped lead Canada's first university Sales program with the aim of bridging the skills gap from academia and the professional world. I continue to help emerging professionals explore and pursue a career in tech by providing mentorship, coaching and talent development workshops.

Outside of work I'm passionate about pickleball, arts and culture!
